Kua aere atu matou i te akarakara i tetai au ngai rai i Adelaide, e taopenga mai ki te "Gorge Wildlife Park," e zoo teia mei tetai 15 meneti i vao ake ia Adelaide.

Retired UCA Minister, David & wife Judith Purling, my host for the last day of my attendance at the UCA assembly in Adelaide, July 2012. They took me to the "Gorge Wildlife Park," a zoo about 15 minutes outside of Adelaide. I had a wonderful time conversing with my friend Suzie the parrot on the top right, but the conversation was limited to just one word: "hello." She really can imitate a human voice. I did not try out other vocabs. I'm feeding an albino female which is part of the kangaroo family. A few minutes later, the little fellow was well inside its mother's pouch with the head sticking out.

Mei te zoo matou ki te ngutuare o te nga metua, kua puka, kua kaikai, puka akaou e akangaro atu mei te ora 12.00am. Popongi ake, kai ti, kua aere atu a David ki te pure, nana oki tetai akoanga i roto i tetai Ekalesia o te UCA, e na Judith i kave iaku ki te airport. Teretere mapu at Matavera

The youth from Ekalesia Nikao came to our church here in Matavera, led by Rev. Papa Aratangi. Also accompanying the youth were a deacon and some youth leaders. There were about 30 of them altogether. The theme of their presentation was based on Psalm 30, the TIA for today Sunday 19 August. The theme for the Matavera youth was strengthening our relationship with God. Both youth groups did well with their presentations despite a few youth forgetting parts of their memory verses, or reading from the paper. Nikao was particularly lively with the addition of a short play displaying some of the actions of youth today to their presentation.

After the church service, everyone took part in the kaikai held in the Sunday School Hall. The host for this month's teretere was my tapere Rotopu, but others in the Ekalesia Matavera also helped out. Like in the past youth teretere, there were plenty of food for everyone. In addition to the youth from Nikao, the youth from the Ekalesia Matavera as well as visitors also took part in the kaikai.

REV. JOHN WILLIAMS, MISSIONARY TO POLYNESIA

Born 1796, died November 1839 in New Hebrides (now Vanuatu)

John Williams (1796–20 November 1839) was an English missionary, active in the South Pacific. Born near London, England, he was trained as a foundry worker and mechanic. In September 1816, the London Missionary Society commissioned him as a missionary in a service held at Surrey Chapel, London.

In 1817, John Williams and his wife, Mary Chawner, voyaged to the Society Islands, a group of islands that included Tahiti, accompanied by William Ellis and his wife. John and Mary established their first missionary post on the island of Raiatea. From there, they visited a number of the Polynesian island chains, sometimes with Mr & Mrs Ellis and other London Missionary Society representatives. Landing on Aitutaki in 1821, they used Tahitian converts to carry their message to the Cook islanders. One island in this group, Rarotonga (said to have been discovered by the Williamses), rises out of the sea as jungle-covered mountains of orange soil ringed by coral reef and turquoise lagoon; Williams became fascinated by it. John and Mary had ten children, but only three survived to adulthood.^[1] The Williamses became the first missionary family to visit Samoa.

The Williamses returned in 1834 to Britain, where John supervised the printing of his translation of the New Testament into the Rarotongan language. They brought back a native of Samoa, named Leota who came to live as a Christian in London. At the end of his days, Leota was buried in Abney Park Cemetery with a dignified headstone paid for by the London Missionary Society, recording his adventure from the South Seas island of his birth. Whilst back in London, John Williams published a "Narrative of Missionary Enterprises in the South Sea Islands", making a contribution to English understanding and popularity of the region, before returning to the Polynesian islands in 1837 on the ship Camden under the command of Captain Robert Clark Morgan.

Most of the Williamses' missionary work, and their delivery of a cultural message, was very successful and they became famed in Congregational circles. However, in November 1839, while visiting a part of the New Hebrides where John Williams was unknown, he and fellow missionary James Harris were killed and eaten by cannibals on the island of Erromango during an attempt to bring them the Gospel. A memorial stone was erected on the island of Rarotonga in 1839 and is still there.

Mrs. Williams died in June 1852. She is buried with their son Rev Samuel Tamatoa Williams, who was born in the New Hebrides, at the old Cedar Circle in London's Abney Park Cemetery; the name of her husband and the record of his death were placed on the most prominent side of the stone monument.

REV. GEORGE H. EASTMAN LMS MISSIONARY TO THE COOK ISLANDS, 1913 – 1927

The Church's third Missionary was George Herbert Eastman, the son of Rev. P.M. Eastman and grandson of Rev. Samuel Eastman who was minister at Windsor from 1863-71. He became a deacon in 1908. The magazine commented: "May this appointment prove to be the starting point of new power and usefulness for the church." In the same year he became superintendent of the Sunday School, which immediately seemed to be invigorated. After only 18 months he resigned to go to Paton College, Nottingham, for his ministerial training. The church was sorry to lose him, but he had left for higher and more glorious work than he had fulfilled here amongst us. He was ordained at a Sunday evening service in July 1913, a most unusual time. Among those taking part was Dr. Ralph Wardlaw Thompson, who had been Foreign Secretary of the LMS for 33 years and was described as looking worn and exhausted. Nevertheless he recounted "in glowing language" the beauty of the Cook Islands, and in particular of Rarotonga, the island to which Mr. Eastman was appointed.

Rarotonga had been discovered by the famous Missionary, John Williams, in 1823. It had a pleasant, unpretentious mission house, but unfortunately the church was particularly ugly: "that wile black and white stone abomination, paralysing one of the most beautiful bits of scenery in the world". Mr. Eastman departed on RMS Adriatic shortly after his ordination, taking with him the glasses presented by the church. The December mail brought a bunch of letters from him. One, for the whole church, was far too long to print in full in the church magazine. Here an ever briefer extract must be sufficient:

"There are five villages on the island.....The other day I cycled all round the island, just over over 20 miles.....At Atiu (on another island) there was a sumptuous native feast, one item on the menu being several pigs roasted whole.....The population of the island is about 800 we probably had some 700 at the service.....One regrets to find in going round the islands, a tendency to discard some of the old reverent tunes taught by earlier Missionaries, for native new tunes.....introduced by the youths, who say they will not come to church unless they can sing what tunes they like".

Mr. Eastman clearly had a difficult task ahead. In 1916 two directors of the LMS who went out there said: "Unless there is a radical change, the churches of the Cook Islands will stand as the blighted ear of a shoot once green and full of promise".

In 1918 he was transferred to Beru in the Gilbert Islands, contrary to his own inclinations and to medical advice. Before leaving Rarotonga he had been able to complete his dictionary of the language. "It is no doubt open to much improvement and too many additions, but as it contains some 6,000 words of the Rarotonga and Cook Islands dialects with their meanings and numerous examples of their use, it should prove useful...." The reason for the medical advice emerged from the same letter: "A large part of the LMS plot of land is a swamp of evil-smelling clayey slime, which is water logged and breeds myriads of mosquitoes". Almost at once he got appendicitis and had to be taken to Sydney, Australian, for an operation. West Street kept in touch as far as possible but there were practical difficulties:

"Our mails reach Ocean Island from Sydney by vessels carrying phosphate; they often lie there for months before a schooner from Tarawa fetches them, then they take many weeks more before delivery to us here. It is not unusual for four or five months to pass without our receiving any mail."

In 1924 Mr. Eastman was back in Maidenhead on furlough "and people said one to another that we have never had a better deputation". The magazine contrasted his remoteness from civilisation with the relative comfort of many mission fields from which "today the old hardships and dangers have quite disappeared." Two years later the magazine gave another example of the way in which the Missionary's life was changing. Rev. W. Kendall Gale reported from a remote part of Madagascar: "Last evening I had one of the most wonderful experiences I can remember. Mr. Raws had got the wireless finished, and into perfect touch with Durban. It was amazing, astounding! I sat here in my arm chair and heard the results of the Test Match. When we heard that England had beaten the Australians, Mr. Raws and I leapt from our seats and cheered..... We go up to Tananarive tomorrow and shall have something to tell the Missionary folk!" The magazine commented: "We hope that Mr. Eastman will soon be in a position to write in similar ecstasies".

Within a year he was indeed able to write, though with rather less enthusiasm than Mr., Gale: "I have already heard from somewhere a voice and songs in English. I think it must be from Brisbane but am not quite sure. I have not been able to get it again, but as yet my apparatus is not completely installed. I hope when all is in order.....to be in touch with the big world beyond the horizon." In 1928 he wrote again to say: "We are now in regular touch once a week by Morse code with the wireless station at Ocean Island 400 miles away..... Occasionally we are able to listen on Sunday evenings to a service broadcast from Australia or New Zealand. This is a real inspiration to us in our isolation".

In 1935 Mr. Eastman heard over the air that he had been awarded a Silver Jubilee medal. This was celebrated in the Gilberts with a holiday, a feast and a day of sports and rejoicing. In response to congratulations from West Street he wrote: "I have not worn it yet but I think I must bring it home when I come so that West Street friends may have their share of the pleasure this gracious recognition of Missionary work gives." He went on to say: "One of these days I hope to hear that a forward move is going to be made out of old Back Lane to a better situation. It was much mooted in my day but was not found practicable then." The Jubilee Medal was but Mr. Eastman's first Honour. A few years later he was to receive the OBE.

During the war Mr. Eastman took part in a joint Government-Mission venture to Fiji. From there he went in the John Williams V to thirteen islands close to enemy-occupied areas. During the visit a church on one island was destroyed by a raider; another island was bombed; four large enemy planes were shot down only a few miles away; submarines were very active; and the ship was battered for nearly a week by a storm and blown well off its course providentially, it turned out, for some vessels on its true course were sunk at the time. The islanders were most generous in their support of the LMS' reconstruction fund. One island whose own church had been destroyed contributed £115. The crew of the John Williams responded by giving the islanders £26 for their own re-building fund. When the ship arrived back in Fiji the Government took her over for repairs and further special service. Mr. Eastman returned to New Zealand to continue his translation of the Bible into Gilbertese and generally to fill in the time until it was possible for him to resume work in the Gilberts.

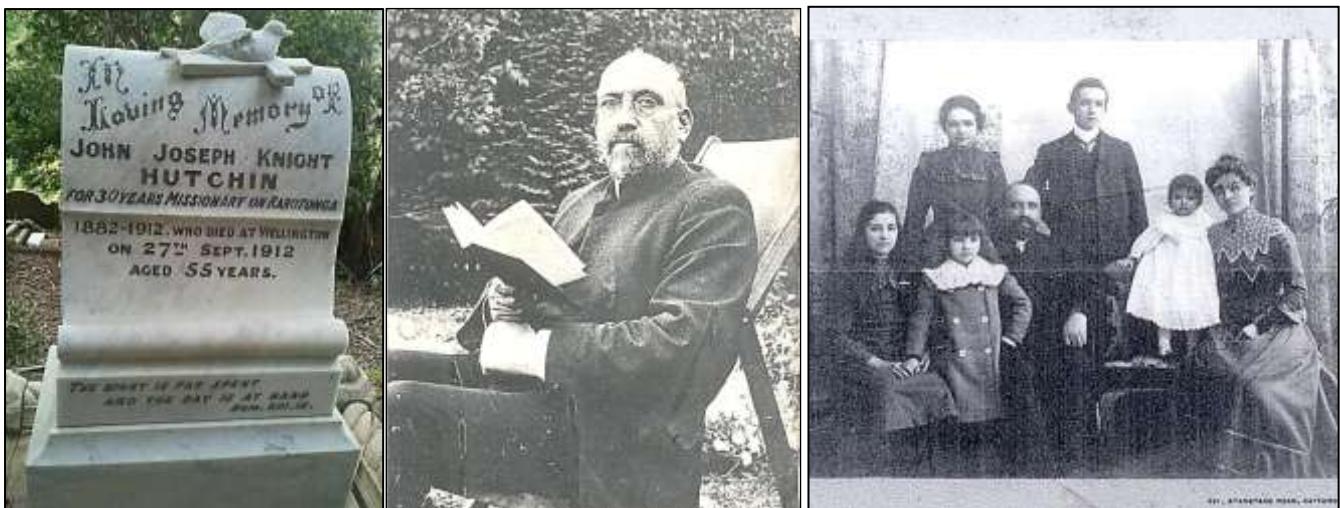

In 1948 the magazine reported the arrival of a very interesting letter from Mr. Eastman – “probably the last from the sphere of labour in which he has performed such splendid work for the Kingdom of God in the far away South Sea Islands”. It was apparent that he had had to work extremely hard “before leaving his mission field for the Homeland”. He had already posted off to the American Bible Society the revised manuscripts for his translation into Gilbertese of the New Testament and was well advanced in his work on the Old Testament. In addition he had completed the manuscript of an English-Gibertese Vocabulary containing some 75,000 English words. The report ended on a lyrical note: “We wish Mr. and Mrs. Eastman a pleasant voyage back to the Homeland, and we look forward with joyous anticipation to their return so that we may see them again after a long absence, and hear from their own lips a description of the work in that part of the world wide mission field in which they have rendered such great service”.

Later in the year Mr. and Mrs. Eastman attended the annual Missionary “At Home”, as did Mr. and Mrs. Humphrey Thompson, who were home on furlough from Kuruman. Mr. Eastman “drew for us a picture of the Christian community in the Gilbert Islands – of their steadfastness and their loyalty. During the recent War these islands had been visited by thousands of American Soldiers during the critical period of rapid Japanese occupation in South-East Asia – and these men from the United States had repeatedly expressed their astonishment that in these isolated islands they had found a virile Church there”.

In April 1949 Mr. Eastman was back again for the Missionary anniversary, a splendid gathering”- and we were glad to see friends from our sister churches at Burnham, Windsor and Slough among us”. He settled in Swanage – and almost immediately the church meeting told the secretary to ask if he would like his membership to be transferred. It was transferred forthwith and Mr. Eastman came to preach within a few weeks and he continued to maintain his contact with West Street. He presented a copy of his Gilbertese Bible in 1959. He died in 1974.

LMS MISSIONARY SHIP “DUFF”

The “Duff” arriving at Matavai Bay, Tahiti, in 1797 with the initial batch of LMS Missionaries. Their arrival heralded a new era for the people of the Pacific. It was the beginning of a steady flow of Missionaries from Mission Societies in Britain, Europe and later America, that flocked to the region, a process that continued until the latter half of the twentieth century. From the outset, the Missionaries were determined to evangelize the indigenous population by converting them to the Christian faith. They came with preconceived ideas concerning the necessity to save the so called many lost souls by converting them from their pagan ways to a more civilized lifestyle. Embracing the Christian faith in all its splendor and trappings was an essential part of this process.

Part 2: News Highlights from Yester-years

Cover page of the monthly "Karere" in the 1940s-50s. The name of the boat is "John Williams VI".

"KO TE KARERE" (Karere) is a regular publication of the Cook Islands Christian Church. Its format has changed a few times over the years. Up to the 1970s, the Karere was published monthly and comprised of 3 parts: (1) scripture readings and uapou questions for each Sunday of the month, (2) a section set aside specifically for Sunday School, and (3) news, notices and announcements for the benefit of the CICC's branches on Rarotonga and in the outer islands. There were no branches in New Zealand and Australia back in those days. Printing was done at Takamoa by the LMS Press.

The Karere is still published today but on an annual basis and is confined to the Sunday scripture readings and uapou questions. News, notices and announcements are published in the bimonthly CICC newsletter. Both publications, in addition to others, are distributed to the CICC's 23 branches in the Cook Islands, New Zealand (22) and Australia (17) in both printed form as well as electronically. They are also available on the CICC's website (www.cicc.net.ck).

This section of the newsletter is devoted to bringing back memories of by-gone years. By reprinting in their original form some of the news articles from the church's past, one can virtually travel back in time and try to experience how things might have been then. For the next few issues of this newsletter, between 3/4 pages of published articles will be reproduced.

The CICC Head Office in Takamoa is greatly indebted to Ngata Urirau, Elder of the Avarua/Matavera Ekalesias for making available copies of the 1950s Karere from his possession for use in this CICC newsletter, thank you very much. Anybody else who has old CICC records that may be of interest to the public and would like them reproduced in this newsletter, please contact the General Secretary at Takamoa on cicccgs@oyster.net.ck or phone 26547.

Part 3: Tongareva Tryout

(Tryout is described as a trial, a test, having a go at something for the first time. The title refers to Chapter 2 of "Slavers in Paradise" by H.E. Maude 1981. This is the second of a number of articles on slavery in the Northern Cook Islands, the first one being published in newsletter 43. The intention is to present the story as thoroughly researched by Maude, for a better appreciation by today's generation of this unfortunate event of a century and a half ago.)

Chapter 2 of "SLAVERS IN PARADISE"

The first ship to be fitted out for the Peruvian labour trade was the 151-ton barque Adelante (Captain August Grassman), charted by the Lima company formed by J.C. Byrne from the firm of Ugarte y Santiago. Byrne's Recruiting Permit stated that he was to procure 'colonists from the South Western Islands of the Pacific'; enquirers were told that he had already recruited islanders from the New Hebrides for work in New Caledonia and that he was now engaged on a voyage to the same group of islands to obtain a trial shipment for Peru. This was to consist of about 170 colonists of both sexes, who are to engage to serve in Peru for the term of 5 years, at 4 dollars per month wages, at the end of which term they are to be sent back to their own country if they wish it, at the expense of the purchaser of the contract, which was printed in Spanish and English (but not in the Polynesian languages as reported by John Barton, the British Consul at Callao), and was transferable. If the initial project proved to be a success he proposed to follow it up with a series of further recruiting voyages.

Byrne had never, in fact, shipped a single recruit from any Pacific island, but he had learned enough about the reputation of Melanesians to equip the well-found barque Adelante to 'more like a Man-O-War than a merchantman,' to quote the words of her mate, John Davis. The hold had been divided into three compartments with iron gratings separating them; there were similar gratings over the hatches to prevent any escape; two swivel guns were mounted by the after hatch to sweep the deck, and two more were placed on top of the poop; two dozen muskets were kept ready for use by the crew, together with 'three blunder-busses and our revolvers and bowie knives, cutlasses and ammunition in abundance,' and finally four extra crew members were signed on to guard the hatches day and night.

With the ailing Byrne himself on board to superintend operations, a Peruvian Government Agent, paid for by the company, to certify that the Congress Law on Asiatic immigration of 14 March 1861 was complied with, a surgeon and an American master and chief officer, the Adelante left Callao on 15 June 1862, her first port of call being Hatibeu Bay on Nukuhiva Island in the Marquesas. She arrived there on 10 July and remained for 3 days taking on water and embarking a Chilean, Jose Villegas, as interpreter, together with 5 Marquesans as a boat's crew, who were to be repatriated as the conclusion of the voyage.

Soon after leaving Nukuhiva, Byrne decided to stop over at the atoll of Tongareva (Penrhyn Island or Mangarongaro) in the Northern Cook Group, which lay on their route, in order to investigate the commercial possibilities of its lagoon, known to contain beche-de-mer and pearl shell. Here he met a beachcomber known as Beni, who told him that a ship seen by them the previous day was the French Protectorate schooner Latouche-Treville, and that she had just recruited 130 Tongarevans to plant sugarcane, coffee and taro in Tahiti on 2-year contract at $4 a month; the first of the French recruiting voyages designed to lower the local labour costs.

In this fortuitous manner Byrne had happened to discover the one island in all Polynesia where people were only too eager to be recruited; their coconut palms, which provided their main food, were suffering from a devastating disease, most of them were dead, and the rest produced only a few shrivelled nuts. The situation had been getting worse for some time; in 1857 the Aitutaki people had sent them a shipment of coconuts when their crop first failed and they were reported to be starving, while not long before the Adelante's visit the Missionary Wyatt Gill had actually been prospecting uninhabited Nassau Island as a possible new home for them.

Added to this blight the Tongarevans had the persuasion, or at least the blessing, of the London Missionary Society teachers on the island, who like the newly converted people themselves felt that every opportunity should be seized for earning money to build impressive churches in emulation of those to be found on Rarotonga, Mangaia, Manihiki and other islands in the Cook Group. Hence it was decided that at least one of the six teachers should accompany each batch of recruits to care for their spiritual welfare.

The Polynesian labour trade, therefore, was in fact due to an accident – the apparently unpremeditated decision of Byrne to call at Tongareva for a reason unconnected with his recruiting venture – and indeed had he persisted in his original scheme, as approved by the Peruvian Government, the difficulties and meager financial returns inherent in the project might well have inhibited anyone from making a second attempt anywhere in the Pacific Islands.

But as it now transpired, there was no longer any need to engage in a long and expensive voyage o Melanesia to procure a cargo of truculent savages when gentler Christianized Polynesians were available for the asking. Plans were accordingly changed and with the help of Beni they had more than a full ship within 9 days, returning to Callao on 13 September with 253 recruits (83 men, 83 women, 30 boys, 19 girls, 19 male and 19 female infants). Clearly the recruits knew nothing about where they were going or what it would be like there; the very concept of a continent – of living other than on a tropical island – was naturally beyond their comprehension, and they went on their simple faith in the European: as Pablo Gamero, the provisions master, testified, ‘without any other contract than a verbal agreement to carry them to one of the islands near to work, offering them $4 per month and abundant maintenance.’ This was the wage current on Tahiti, but less than the $6-$10 paid at Fanning.

It was a happy voyage, for when the islanders were found to be gentle, friendly and well behaved they were allowed to roam the deck, excited at being on a ship and still more so at the adventure lying ahead, the main events were the death of Byrne himself and one Tongarevan woman, and the birth of 3 children; there were therefore 251 islanders on board when she left Tongareva. Food ran short, which was to be a common feature of these voyages, and additional supplies had to be obtained from 2 ships met en route and at the port of Huacho.

On their arrival at Callao the recruits were sold at $200 for men, $150 for women, $100 for boys, care being taken to avoid splitting up the 83 families; the payments were stated to be in refund of passage money, thus avoiding undesirable comparisons with the slave trade. The new arrivals, of which 206 (including the 30 boys and 10 of the girls) were classed as workers, were consigned to J.M de Ugarte, acting on behalf of the investors in Byrne’s company, who disposed of them to buyers requiring domestic servants or agricultural labourers.

Henry Watson, a British merchant in Valparaiso who had lived in Tahiti, informed the British Charge d’Affaires in Santiago that according to his information the sale of the Tongarevans resulted in a profit of $40,000 on an outlay of $10,000 (or 400 percent for approximately three and a half months’ work). Even if waterfront intelligence set the figure too high, and a calculation based on stated prices suggests that total sales were nearer $32,000, it was generally agreed that the company's profits on the venture were extremely high and the expenses involved in the unexpectedly short voyage inconsiderable: in short, Byrne had struck a bonanza.

News of the lucrative human cargoes awaiting the enterprising entrepreneur on islands so near at hand resulted in a rush to form small companies to buy or charter anything that would float, fit them out for the new trade and set sail for the islands while pickings were good; and within 3 weeks of the Adelante's arrival no fewer than 5 Peruvian and 2 Chilean ships had left Callao. These small-time speculators as they were called, were for the most part interested solely in maximizing profits from the collection of South Sea Islanders; and as a consequence few of the captains whom they employed allowed humanitarian considerations to interfere with the work in hand, which was essentially to entice or force as many Polynesians on board their ships as possible and to land them alive in Peru.

More than one of the ships was rumored to have been an African slaver, while the barque Empresa was formerly on the China coolie run; and these may have required no special fitments for the trade. But the Adelante became the prototype for most of the recruiting fleet and her adaptation was evidently studied and copied by other ship-owners and charterers who had no knowledge themselves of what was required. Iron gratings and a plentiful supply of arms became the norm and if the Adelante differed from many of the ships which followed her hopefully from Peru it was mainly in being seaworthy, which many of them were not; 'amongst the ships already dispatched are several crazy old vessels that had long been laid up as hulks, but which in the enthusiasm of speculators have been equipped as good enough for the service.' To sum up, the Peruvian recruiting fleet comprised for the most part a motley assemblage of aged coastal vessels averaging about 180 tons and fitted with bunks, gratings and armament on the traditional lines of the African slave trade.

The first of these ships to arrive at Tongareva was the brig Trujillo which, however, belonged to the same firm and had no intention of poaching the remaining islanders, whom the Adelante had promised to return for, but merely stopped to kidnap a local chief as interpreter, with his wife and two boys, before joining her consorts the Apurimac and Manuelita Costas off Manihiki, where the three hoped to be first in a virgin field.

The next visitor seems to have been a little 98-ton schooner called the Genara, which embarked forty three voluntary recruits (19 males and 24 females), together with a second teacher, ostensibly to collect beche-de-mer at Titimatarangi, the local name for Christmas Islands. It was a good ruse to obtain willing workers and no doubt suggested by the beachcomber Beni, for the neighbouring Fanning Island had been deservedly popular with the people of the Northern Cooks since 1852, when Henry English commenced recruiting on Manihiki and Rakahanga for work on his coconut plantations there on 1- or 2-year contracts.

The Genera is not a positive identification since there is no record of her departure from Callao (possibly she sailed from some minor port). Nevertheless she is the only one which fits the islanders' description of a 'small two-masted vessel,' evidently of limited passenger-carrying capacity, and she is known to have landed her complement of forty-three at Callao on 8 March 1863, their island of origin not being stated. Although Wyatt Gill was told that she had embarked thirty-five, this figure did not include the teacher and his family; the total of forty-three is therefore considered more likely to be correct.

Having discarded her passengers and retired, the Adelante left again for Tongareva on 10 October 1862, to pick up the remaining able-bodied islanders and their families. There she was met by the brig Jorge Zahara, also owned by Ugarte Santiago and having as passenger the other member of the original firm of licensees, B.D. Clark, the insolvent debtor from Melbourne. The Jorge Zahara had actually left Callao over a fortnight earlier but stopped at Nukuhiva to repatriate the boat's crew from the Adelante and pick up another.

There are only two more visits recorded by recruiting ships. The brig Ellen Elizabeth called on 25 January and stayed for ten days before leaving for the Gilbert Islands, followed later by a barque, probably the Dolores Carolina; but there was no one left to take, infants and the aged being unsalable.

Tongareva is the largest atoll in the Cook Group and its characteristic pattern of dispersed settlement had led to the population living on their coconut land holdings scattered around the lagoon, rather than in villages as on the smaller atolls. But as soon as the islanders were converted to Christianity four churches were erected, at Omoka, Motu Unga, Tautua, and Te Puka, and by 1862 nearly everyone was living in one of the four villages which grew up around these churches.

3 Where the Peruvian ships anchored: Omoka Village on Tongareva. From F.V. de G. Stevenson, The Cruise of the 'Janet Nicol' . . . (London 1915). NL.

When Wyatt Gill called at the atoll on 11 March 1863 in the mission ship John Williams he found forty inhabitants of Omoka still living in their village by the main entrance into the lagoon with the sole remaining teacher Ngatikaro, who despite offers of gold made to him by the recruiters had warned his people against leaving, and a further forty eight (for the most part the aged and children) in the other three villages. He was unable, however, to find out from this remnant how many had been recruited by the Adelante and her second voyage and, as he suspected, the estimate given to him of '50-80' and 'over 50' were too low.

It is fortunately now possible to be more exact, since we know that the Adelante went on to Manihiki and Rakahanga and that at the latter island the Jorge Zahara recruited thirty. The two ships then returned to Tongareva on 21 January where the thirty colonists were transferred to the Adelante which thereupon left for Callao with 203 (77 men, 78 women, 15 boys and 33 infants); it can be assumed, therefore, that 173 of these were from Tongareva. The Jorge Zahara, on the other hand, went direct to Pukapuka, where she obtained all her recruits with the exception of the Rarotongan teacher Josia who, with his wife, had been taken from Tongareva as an interpreter.

The total number of islanders transported from Tongareva to Peru therefore totaled approximately 472, a figure which agrees well with the estimate of 700 living on the island before recruiting began, less the 130 taken to Tahiti and 88 found by Gill in March. The discrepancy of only 10 may be accounted for, in all probability, by the inexactitude of the original population estimate.

Part 4: Cook Islands Missionaries Abroad

Mathew 28:18 & 19, “Jesus drew near and said to them, I have been given all authority in heaven and on earth. Go then, to all peoples everywhere and make them my disciples; baptize them in the name of the Father, the Son, and the Holy Spirit, and teach them to obey everything I have commanded you. And I will be with you always to the end of the age.”

I am indeed pleased to make known to everyone, those heroes of the Lord who went into the world after their training here at Takamoa Theological College in the 18th and 19th centuries, to put into practice what the Lord commanded in the verse above. The fact that they never knew what awaited them on the other side, is truly a bold and heroic move for them and their families to make. To leave the comfort of their surrounding home islands and extended families and travel into the unknown is certainly a sign of fearlessness of what lies ahead and a clear sign of complete trust in the Lord. Despite the fact that they knew some of their colleagues who went before them were killed whilst serving the Lord in foreign lands, this somehow never dampened their spirit and desire to respond to the calling. To them, we today owe the greatest respect and honor for their unending desire to serve the Lord even when death would be a possible end-result.

The following list of Cook Islands Missionaries to the Pacific Islands comes from the archives here at Takamoa. As there is no record of the name(s) of those who put it together, they must nevertheless be commended for compiling this information for the benefit of those after them. It is truly a valuable resource, one that I feel a lot more people need to know and therefore be appreciative of. I have no doubt that the descendants today of the heroes of yester-years will feel very proud of their fore-fathers, and they certainly deserve to be so. After all, I doubt if many people today will want to go down the path that they did if we turned back the time. Admittedly of course, not all of them were angels in terms of the nature of their return to the Cook Islands according to the list, but the fact of the matter is that they chose to take the plunge into the unknown, and that in itself is being unequivocally heroic in my firm view.

As can be seen from the list, the first Cook Islander Missionary sent from Takamoa was Marama in 1839 to Samoa where he died in 1873. The last was Turakiare Tearuariki of Mauke who went to Papua New Guinea in 1963 and came back in 1975 (he became President of the CICC from 1976-1988). This means over a period of 136 years, the LMS Missionaries from England trained and posted 208 Cook Islands Missionaries throughout the Pacific, from Hawaii in the north, to Samoa, New Hebrides, Loyalty Islands in the south, and Papua in the west. The record shows that the majority of them went to Papua and never came back home, a lot were killed in the line of duty.

I was very much moved with this record and the bravery of these heroes – one of which is my own ancestor – that I chose to retype it myself and have it made known publicly through this issue of the newsletter. Let us all salute to their true heroism and remember them always in our prayers. As the saying goes, “Lest We Forget.”

Mathew 16:24-27, “Then Jesus said to his disciples, if anyone wants to come with me, he must forget self, carry his cross, and follow me. For whoever wants to save his own life will lose it; but whoever loses his life for my sake will find it. Will a person gain anything if he wins the whole world but loses his life? Of course not. There is nothing he can give to regain his life. For the Son of Man is about to come in the glory of his Father with his angels, and then he will reward each one according to his deeds.”

Notes on the above list:

1. There is no explanation in the archive as to why some information are missing from the above list. As observed, it is not known whether some Missionaries have returned or not.
2. Except for a few, the record only recorded the first names of the Missionaries. It is not known why their full names were not stated. It may have been standard procedure at the time.
3. According to the list, some spent just a year or even less at Takamoa before being posted out. This would seem possible if their theological training has already commenced in the mission stations that they would have been trained in by the early English Missionaries prior to their admission to Takamoa.
4. Given that Christianity arrived in Rarotonga in 1823 and Takamoa Theological College was opened in 1839, some of the early students would therefore have been born before the arrival of Christianity and thus have experienced heathenism prior to their conversion. For them, the change-over to Christianity, let alone a church minister, would have to be quite dramatic.
5. It is not known why no more Missionaries were sent out between 1913-63.
6. Past issues of the CICC Newsletter ran stories of selected Missionaries as follows:
 - Newsletter 19 & 20 Missionary Ruatoka to Papua
 - Newsletter 21 Missionary Piri to Papua
 - Newsletter 22 Missionary Tauraki to Papua
 - Newsletter 23 Missionary Anederea to Papua
 - Newsletter 24 Missionary Teava to Papua
 - Newsletter 26-31 Missionary Turaki Teauariki to Papua
 - Newsletter 42 Re-enactment of Missionary Paoo to New Caledonia
7. Books have been written about other Missionaries by Pacific writers and academics such as Marjorie Crocombe. They provide more insights into the lives and challenges faced by those Missionaries.
8. Since 1975 after the return of the last Missionary, no more Cook Islands Missionary was posted outside of the Cook Islands. Instead, trained ministers were sent to New Zealand and Australia where Cook Islanders have migrated. As of today, 22 CICC parishes have been established in New Zealand and 18 in Australia; these numbers are likely to rise over time. In addition, the CICC has a ministers exchange programme with the Ekalesia Porotetani Maohi, the former LMS in Tahiti, where 2 ministers are currently posted and one of theirs here in Rarotonga.

DOCTRINE OF THE TRIUNE GOD: A THEOLOGICAL STUDY TUATUA NO TE TORU TAI

Part 4 (continued from last issue of newsletter)

Scriptures Demonstrating God, Who is One, is Also Three:

Old Testament Scriptures

While there is no explicit statement in the Old Testament affirming the Trinity, we can confidently say that the Old Testament not only allows for the Trinity, but also implies that God is a triune Being in a number of ways:

1. The name Elohim, translated God, is the plural form of El. While this is what is called a plural of plenitude pointing to the power and majesty of God, it certainly allows for the New Testament revelation of the Trinity of God.
2. There are many instances where God uses the plural pronoun to describe Himself (see Gen. 1:26; 3:22; 11:7; Isa. 6:8).
3. In the creation account, both God the Father and God the Holy Spirit are seen in the work of creation. It is stated that God created heaven and earth (Gen. 1:1), but that it was the Holy Spirit who moved over the earth to infuse it with life in the sense of protecting and participating in the work of creation (Gen. 1:2).
4. Writing about the Messiah, Isaiah reveals Him to be equal with God, calling Him the “Mighty God” and “Eternal Father” (Isa. 9:6).
5. Several passages reveal a distinction of Persons within the Godhead.
 - In Psalm 110:1, David demonstrates there is a distinction of Persons between “LORD,” the one speaking, and the one addressed called by David, “my Lord.” David was indicating the Messiah was no ordinary king, but his own Lord, Adoni (my Lord), one who was God Himself. So God the first Person addresses God the second Person. This is precisely Peter’s point when He quotes this Psalm to show the resurrection of the Messiah was anticipated in the Old Testament.
 - The Redeemer (who must be divine, Isa. 7:14; 9:6) is distinguished from the Lord (Isa. 59:20).
 - The Lord is distinguished from the Lord in Hosea 1:6-7. The one speaking here is Yahweh, the Lord, yet, note the statement in verse 7, “I will have compassion ... and deliver them by the Lord their God.”
 - The Spirit is distinguished from the Lord in a number of passages (Isa. 48:16; 59:21; 63:9-10).
6. In the Messianic prophecy of Isaiah 7:14, God made it clear that the One who would be born of the virgin would also be Immanuel, God with us.

7. Two other passages which imply the Trinity are Isaiah 48:16 and 61:1. In Isaiah 48:16 all three Persons are mentioned and yet seen as distinct from each other. See also Gen. 22:15-16.

New Testament Scriptures

The case for the Triunity of God is even stronger in the New Testament. Here it can be unequivocally demonstrated the Father is God, the Son is God, and the Holy Spirit is God. Furthermore, the New Testament teaches us that these three names are not synonymous, but speak of three distinct and equal Persons.

1. The Father is called God (John 6:27; 20:17; 1 Cor. 8:6; Gal. 1:1; Eph. 4:6; Phil. 2:11; 1 Pet. 1:2).
2. Jesus Christ, the Son is declared to be God. His deity is proven by the divine names given to Him, by His works that only God could do (upholding all things, Col. 1:17; creation, Col. 1:16, John 1:3; and future judgment, John 5:27), by His divine attributes (eternity, John 17:5; omnipresence, Matt. 28:20; omnipotence, Heb. 1:3; omniscience, Matt. 9:4), and by explicit statements declaring His deity (John 1:1; 20:28; Titus 2:13; Heb. 1:8).
3. The Holy Spirit is recognized as God. By comparing Peter's comments in Acts 5:3 and 4, we see that in lying to the Holy Spirit (vs. 3), Ananias was lying to God (vs. 4). He has the attributes which only God can possess like omniscience (1 Cor. 2:10) and omnipresence (1 Cor. 6:19), and He regenerates people to new life (John 3:5-6, 8; Tit. 3:5), which must of necessity be a work of God for only God has the power of life. Finally, His deity is evident by the divine names used for the Spirit as "the Spirit of our God," (1 Cor. 6:11), which should be understood as "the Spirit, who is our God."

Ryrie writes: "Matthew 28:19 best states both the oneness and threeness by associating equally the three Persons and uniting them in one singular name. Other passages like Matthew 3:16-17 and 2 Corinthians 13:14 associate equally the three Persons but do not contain the strong emphasis on unity as does Matthew 28:19."¹

The New Bible Dictionary, adds to this the following evidence:

The evidence of the NT writings, apart from the Gospels, is sufficient to show that Christ had instructed his disciples on this doctrine to a greater extent than is recorded by any of the four Evangelists. They wholeheartedly proclaim the doctrine of the Trinity as the threefold source of redemption. The outpouring of the Spirit at Pentecost brought the personality of the Spirit into greater prominence and at the same time shed light anew from the Spirit upon the Son. Peter, in explaining the phenomenon of Pentecost, represents it as the activity of the Trinity: 'This Jesus ... being ... exalted at the right hand of God, and having received from the Father the promise of the Holy Spirit, he has poured out this which you see and hear' (Acts 2:32-33). So the church of Pentecost was founded on the doctrine of the Trinity.

In 1 Cor. there is mention of the gifts of the Spirit, the varieties of service for the same Lord and the inspiration of the same God for the work (1 Cor. 12:4-6). Peter traces salvation to the same triunal source: 'destined by God the Father and sanctified by the Spirit for obedience to Jesus Christ' (1 Pet. 1:2). The apostolic benediction: 'The grace of the Lord Jesus Christ and the love of God and the fellowship of the Holy Spirit be with you all' (2 Cor. 13:14), not only sums up the apostolic teaching, but interprets the deeper meaning of the Trinity in Christian experience, the saving grace of the Son giving access to the love of the Father and to the communion of the Spirit.

What is amazing, however, is that this confession of God as One in Three took place without struggle and without controversy by a people indoctrinated for centuries in the faith of the one God, and that in entering the Christian church they were not conscious of any break with their ancient faith.² From the above evidence, it should be clear that the Scripture teaches God is one and three.

Difficulties With the Trinity Considered and Answered:

The Meaning of “Only-begotten”

1. John 1:14 And the Word became flesh, and dwelt among us, and we beheld His glory, glory as of the only begotten from the Father, full of grace and truth.
2. John 1:18 No man has seen God at any time; the only begotten God, who is in the bosom of the Father, He has explained Him. In John 1:18, the King James Version has huios, “Son,” in place of theos, “God,” and reads, “No man hath seen God at any time; the only begotten Son, which is in the bosom of the Father, he hath declared him.”

Because to our mind the words “only begotten” suggest birth or beginning, some have tried to take the use of this designation of Jesus Christ to mean that Christ had a beginning, that He only became the Son of God. Such an understanding denies His eternality and also the concept of the trinity. So what does John mean by the term “only begotten?”

“Only begotten” is the Greek monogenes, a compound of monos, used as an adjective or adverb meaning “alone, only.” Kittel writes: “In compounds with genes, adverbs describe the nature rather than the source of derivation (emphasis mine). Hence monogenes is used for the only child. More generally it means ‘unique’ or ‘incomparable.’”³ In the New Testament the term occurs only in Luke, John, and Hebrews, but an instructive use is found for us in Hebrews 11:17 where it is used of Isaac as the monogenes of Abraham. Isaac was not the only Son of the Patriarch, but he was the unique son of the promise of God. The emphasis is not on derivation but on his uniqueness and special place in the heart of Abraham.

Vine has an excellent summary of the use of monogenes in John 1:14 and 18:

With reference to Christ, the phrase “the only begotten from the Father,” John 1:14, R.V. (see also the marg.), indicates that as the Son of God He was the sole representative of the Being and character of the One who sent Him. In the original the definite article is omitted both before “only begotten” and before “Father,” and its absence in each case serves to lay stress upon the characteristics referred to in the terms used. The Apostle’s object is to demonstrate what sort of glory it was that he and his fellow Apostles had seen. That he is not merely making a comparison with earthly relationships is indicated by para, “from.” The glory was that of a unique relationship and the word “begotten” does not imply a beginning of His Sonship. It suggests relationship indeed, but must be distinguished from generation as applied to man. We can only rightly understand the term “the only begotten” when used of the Son, in the sense of unoriginated relationship. “The begetting is not an event of time, however remote, but a fact irrespective of time. The Christ did not become, but necessarily and eternally is the Son. He, a Person, possesses every attribute of pure Godhood. This necessitates eternity, absolute being; in this respect He is not ‘after’ the Father” (Moule). In John 1:18 the clause “The Only Begotten Son, which is in the bosom of the Father,” expresses both His eternal union with the Father in the Godhead and the ineffable intimacy and love between them, the Son sharing all the Father’s counsels and enjoying all His affections.

Another reading is monogenes Theos, ‘God only-begotten.’ In John 3:16 the statement, “God so loved the world that He gave His Only Begotten Son,” must not be taken to mean that Christ became the Only Begotten Son by Incarnation. The value and the greatness of the gift lay in the Sonship of Him who was given. His Sonship was not the effect of His being given. In John 3:18 the phrase “the Name of the Only Begotten Son of God” lays stress upon the full revelation of God’s character and will, His love and grace, as conveyed in the Name of One who, being in a unique relationship to Him, was provided by Him as the Object of faith. In 1 John 4:9 the statement “God hath sent His Only Begotten Son into the world” does not mean that God sent out into the world one who at His birth in Bethlehem had become His Son. Cp. the parallel statement, “God sent forth the Spirit of His Son,” Gal. 4:6, R.V., which could not mean that God sent forth One who became His Spirit when He sent Him.⁴

TUMU TAPURA 3: TE IKIANGA A TE ATUA

Ka iki ua atu rai te Atua, i tetai ua atu tangata tei inangaro ia e ia, i roto i te au uki tangata, ei au arataki, no te iti-tangata. Noatu eaa te tu o te reira tangata. Me e tangata meitaki, me e tangata kino, me e tangata kite kore, me e tangata kite, me e tane, me e vaine. Me e tamariki, me e aronga mamaata, me e tangata maroiroi, me e tangata paruparu. Me e tangata tuikaa, me e tangata ngateitei, me e tuitarere, me e tangata rangatira.

Kare a te Atua tangata akavaavaa. Mei te mea e, ka inangaro te Atua i te kapiki i tetai tangata, tana i inangaro ei rave i tana angaanga. Ka iki ua mai aia i tetai uatu tangata, noatu eaa tona turanga. Eaa ra te tumu i kore ei te Atua i kapiki e ko te aronga memeitaki ua ei rave i tana angaanga? No te mea, ka rauka ua i te Atua, i te taui i te ngakau tangata, kia rauka iaia i te rave i ta te Atua angaanga, i anoano iaia kia rave.

To tatou tu to te tangata me ka inangaro tatou i tetai au tangata ei rave i te angaanga, ka akara ua mai tatou ko te aronga kite ua e te maroiroi. E aronga kua kite takare ratou i te rave i te angaanga. E au tangata kua apii ia ratou, e kua rauka to ratou au peapa apii teitei atu i to tetai. Okotai rai ngai ta te tangata ka akara, ko te peapa ngateitei tei rauka iaia. Kare te tangata e akara i tona ngakau, tona tu, e tona oraanga.

Me akara tatou i reira i te au tangata, ta te Atua e kapiki nei ei rave angaanga nana, kare i te aronga kite ua e te marama ua. E aronga kite kore takiri tetai au tangata. E aronga kino takiri tetai aronga, e aronga akaaka rava tetai aronga, kare takiri o tatou manako anga atu ia ratou. E aronga puapingakore rava tetai aronga. Eaa ra te tumu i pe ra a'i te Atua? No te mea na te Atua oki i anga i te tangata. Na te Atua uaorai e oronga i te kite e te marama kitea kore ia e te tangata ki te tangata tana i anoano i te iki.

E Atua meitaki a lehova, kare aia e akavaavaa i tetai uatu tangata, tana ka inangaro, ei akatupu i tana angaanga, i roto i te au tuatau e te au uki, kia meitaki te ora anga o te iti tangata.

Kia akameitaki tatou i te tu o ta te Atua iki anga, i tana aronga i inangaro, ei rave angaanga nana. Me kua iki te Atua ia koe, kia rekareka koe, e kia rave ra koe i tana i karanga atu kia koe.
